Join us for a private tour - exclusive to Bal Harbour residents and hotel guests - of Chromosaturaton by Carlos Cruz-Diez at PAMM.

Chromosaturaton is an immersive environment that reimagines color as an embodied experience. Initially conceived in 1965, the installation consists of three connected chambers infused with intensely saturated red, green, and blue light. Upon entering the space, visitors are transported by a chromatic experience that shifts as they move from one space to the next. The experience scrambles the retina, which is normally accustomed to perceiving a wide range of colors simultaneously. Eliciting both a strong sensorial and emotional response in viewers, the installation transitions from a visual experience into a bodily one, underscoring the notion of color as a material, physical phenomenon that unfolds continuously in time and space.
